

A STUDY ON THE SOCIOEMOTIONAL DEVELOPMENT OF CHILDREN AND ADOLESCENTS IN THE LOCALITY OF SARABECHI

Argelia Contreras Aguirre

INTRODUCTION

This work is the result of research conducted in the locality of Sarabeachi, Guachochi municipality, part of the Tarahumara Sierra in Chihuahua. According to INEGI data, it has 62 inhabitants, the majority of whom are speakers of the Rarámuri language.

The research aims to understand and collect information about the socioemotional development of the children and adolescents in the community through artistic activities.

The main motivation is to prevent children and adolescents from becoming involved in alcoholism, drug addiction, and participation in criminal groups.

We expect that the results of this research will serve as a starting point for the implementation of actions that search to improve the well-being and socioemotional development of this community.

OBJETIVO GENERAL

To identify and propose specific actions that contribute to the well-being and overall development of the children and adolescents in the community of Sarabeachi.

OBJETIVOS ESPECÍFICOS

Conduct research with the aim of analyzing and understanding the role of emotions in the socioemotional development of children in the community, as well as investigating the function and benefits of artistic activities in the cognitive, emotional, and social development of children and adolescents in that community.

DATA AND METHODOLOGY

The research was carried out through various techniques, such as interviews and field diaries.

Interviews:

Interviews were used as a tool to obtain data through a semi-structured dialogue between the interviewer and the interviewee. These were applied in the following way:

Interviews were conducted with 36 individuals, randomly selected from the total population of 62 inhabitants and 11 households. Among the interviewed individuals were 20 adults and 16 children and adolescents distributed across age and gender as indicated in the table.

	Gender	Distribution per Age
9 children	Females	7 years old: 1 8 years old: 3
	Males	9 years old: 2 10 years old: 3
7 adolescents	Females	13 years old: 1 16 years old: 2
	Males	12 years old: 2 15 years old: 2
20 adults	Females	25-30 years old: 9 45 years old: 3
	Males	25-30 years old: 6 32 years old: 2

Interviews consisted of questions related to the community, school, and family. For adults, the focus was on general aspects of the community, available services, the family role, the political organization, the community member's activities, and the perception of education.

For children and adolescents, the questions were more centered on themselves and meaningful learning. They were asked about their interest in attending classes, motivations, relationships with their peers, classroom activities, preferred learning style, and the interview concluded with an activity related to 'what I dream to be' (lo que sueño ser).

RESULTS

The analysis of the information was done through the observation of repetitive data.

Here we illustrate the results of the activity 'what I dream to be' (lo que sueño ser)

From this activity we observed the following:

- Children are afraid to verbally express describe their work, however their drawings help them as a tool to express their thoughts and emotions
- Children between 9 and 12 years old have a limited perspective, mentioning that they will only be involved in domestic activities.
- Only two children between 13 and 16 years old expressed that they would like to engage in creative activities. This excites them, as they want to put their skills into practice. They mentioned that their schools primarily focus on sports and lack activities that include crafts.

This activity lead us to think that the lack of social and emotional communication is a common issue among children and adolescents in this community

CONCLUSION

As part of the analysis of the collected information we noted that:

- Children are afraid to express their emotions for fear of being judged or ridiculed.
- Parents are busy with their work responsibilities and struggle to establish a meaningful emotional connection with their children

PROPOSAL

One proposal to address the lack of communication and affection in children and adolescents is to carry over artistic related activities, including the following

- Craft workshops where children can showcase their creations and engage in dialogues with others.
- Dance sessions
- Music sessions
